Radke Gets Email Address; Hell Freezes Over

Wausau, WI Despite decades of insistence that the Internet was just a passing fad, Leinie's Guy Deano Radke got an email account in late January 2024.

To be accurate, his son Greggo Radke established it for him. Stated Greggo, "I just finally got sick of being the middle man and having to print off the GWA newsletters for him. Now that he's finally got a smart phone, he can get them himself."

"Yep, yep, yep I guess I've got email now," admitted Deano. "Greggo has it all set up."

"Well, he might have email," stated Leinie's Guy Keet Moericke. "But I'm not sure he ever reads it. I sent him an email a month ago asking for a response and haven't heard diddly."

"He should be able to get his Michigan license on line now," nodded Leinie's Guy Mikey Bishop. "That's good."

"Good for Deano," assessed Leinie's Guy Puck Johnson. "He'll really be in the loop now."

"I'll have to get his address," stated Leinie's Guy Lard Krueger. "I've got a couple recipes I want to send him."

Krueger Comes Up Empty in West Coast Camp Wench Search

Appleton, WI After spending more than a month combing the California beaches for a GWA camp wench, Leinie's Guy and reigning Angler of the Year Mark "Lard-dog" Krueger reported that he had come up with exactly "nuthin".

"Amazingly, there just weren't a lot of gals interested in spending 10 days in a camper in the Northwoods with a bunch of 60-70 year old guys," shrugged Krueger. "Heck, I even went to some nude beaches thinking that the women there might be a little more open minded. Still nuthin."

Mark "Lard-dog" Krueger in his "relentless search" for a 2024 Camp Wench.

"I don't think he looked that hard," speculated Leinie's Guy Keet Moericke. "Every picture I saw, he was just sitting around drinking beer."

"Good try, Lard," muttered Leinie's Guy JJ Henry. "Thanks for nuthin... again."
